Tonight, the main street in my town is a different place. It's not for cars. Tonight, it's for people, music, and fun. It's the night of the annual street fair.

The air is full of exciting sounds and smells. The music from the band is loud and cheerful. The smell of popcorn is everywhere. The lights from the stalls are bright and colorful, like a rainbow on the street.

Many people are here. Families and friends are walking around. Everyone is happy. The children are excited about the games and the prizes. At the end of the street, there is a big Ferris wheel. It's tall against the dark night sky.

I'm here with my daughter. We're in line for some fresh lemonade. It's a warm night, so the lemonade is a perfect treat. This fair is a simple tradition in our town, but it is one of the best nights of the summer.
